THE MAKING OF THE FLAG!

Oration of Miss Hilda Schwab, Washington's birthday, Feb. 22nd, 1904 at Marion Opera House.

"Flag of a thousand battles, Beautiful flag of the free, Waving from lake to ocean, Waving from sea to sea: Old Glory, Old Glory, the world waits thy story, Float on, float ever on, o'er land and sea, Old Glory, Old Glory, the world waits thy story, Float on, float ever on, thou emblem of the free." Riley.

There is a picture going the rounds in the land which is not only pictorially patriotic, but is symbolic of our country's growth and power.

In the room, which at once strikes the eye as simple yet tasteful, sit two stately gentlemen, a third standing to the rear and near these, while opposite the group, sits a woman of noble mien and across her lap falls a cloth of stars and stripes in glorious color; she is shaking out its folds, while her countenance beams with question, "How now, my good friends, have I met with my needle your suggestions and your hopes?" And looking intently at the noble faces of those courtly gentlemen you almost hear them say, "Tis well done, Madam Betsey, 'tis all that we can wish."

We get now the force of the scene, it is the birth of Old Glory.

There it is, the strongest, because the central and permanent part of the deeds of that day.

How matchless in color—with a field of blue into which had been woven inextinguishable stars; the red stripes typifying the glory, the valor and the self-sacrifice of the men who died that liberty might live; and the white emblematic of purity, fitly representing those principles to which a nation had been dedicated.

"When Freedom from her mountain height Unfurled her standard to the air She tore the azure robe of night And set the stars of glory there; She mingled with its gorgeous dyes The milky baldric of the skies, And stripped its pure celestial white With streakings of the morning light."

What grace in its stars of white, its field of blue and its bars of white and red! In truth, the "Flag of the free hearts' hope and home,

By angel hands to valor given, Thy stars have lit the welkin dome And all thy hues were born in Heaven."

But is the flag more noteworthy or so typical of America than those who watched its infant hours?

There sits the leader in the field; the man who beneath the great elm on Boston Common, swore never to retire from the field of battle until he had met the necessity that had called him to it, to make the enemies of his country acknowledge America's powerful in arms as she had been gentle in resistance.

Old Flag, you had nothing to fear. The sword of Washington guarded your cradle, the undying devotion of his great soul was to follow you upon every field. And at last his sagacious mind would transmit you from the field of battle to the civic arena and there ere he died have his countrymen swear allegiance. When that unholy war swept over our country like "a troubled vision o'er the breast of dreaming Sorrow," when the stars and stripes were hauled down on Fort Sumter in '61 flags without number were raised above every firebrand in the land and all the glorious achievements which that flag represented with all its hallowed memories glowed with burning fervor in the heart of every lover of liberty and union. The mad assault which was made upon the flag at that time aroused its defenders and kindled a patriotic flame which could not be quenched until it had demoralized the unholy cause which assaulted our holy banner.

But what would have become of the American flag and Washington's valor had it not been for the great silent force of men and women whose assistance had it not been given our glorious cause would have been lost; the worth of whose aid can hardly be estimated, given in such strenuous times. Such a man was Robt. Morris, the man who gave America credit at home and abroad. Grouped with Washington in the picture his confidence indicated strength in his cause and a confidence which was not mere stipulation, but in actual fact in the use of his purse. Had it not been for Robt. Morris the campaign of 1781 would probably never have been conducted for he contributed his entire fortune to further his country's interests and to protect the flag.

Moneyed men have always been found to support their countries in days of disordered credit; for instance, Lincoln issued millions of greenbacks in the necessity of the hour, worth in truth, no more than so much paper; but it bore the promise of the United States to pay sometime, somewhere, and instantly gold came pouring forth to buy it.

Here's to the Morris, the Shermans, the Vanderbilts and the Carnegies and all those matchless financiers who sustain a nation's power which has been gained by her soldiers and statesmen!

The great silent men and women of the world—no one knows how much they accomplish. In our revolt from English tyranny a Mrs. Murray aided Washington by entertaining some British officers at a critical time when all the cunning of Putnam would have been for naught had she not foiled the English.

What a world of glorious action has been inspired by the Star Spangled Banner.

One man, tho' a Washington, could not have held the nation from defeat, but many were required to maintain its organization, so as a representative of the many, in one there stands out Wm. Ross, the Commoner, in whose home the flag was made.

May our flag always be the embodied sentiment of Washington, its originator, and excite in the hearts of all the nations the love, the holy patriotism, the heavenly devotion and sacrifice which went with every stitch placed in the folds of the first flag by the supple fingers of Betsey Ross.

"O, my America, whose flag we throne amid the sky, Beneath whose folds 'tis life to live and noblest death to die, I hear the peaceful bugles blow across the silver sea And bless my God, my palace stands a cottage home in thee: So speak the voices of the Past, ye children of the land, Behind ye thrice a hundred years, before a thousand grand, Such are the legends of yon flag that gladdens land and sea Such is the hand that scrolls the air this day of jubilee, Flag of the sun that glows for all, Flag of the breeze that blows for all, Flag of the sea that flows for all, Flag of the school that stands for all; Flag of the people, one and all; Hail, flag of Liberty—all hail—Hail, glorious years to come!"

THRO' KENTUCKY.

Thro' the grand state of Kentucky, Where the "Old Home" got its name, Where the fields are overflowing With the yellow ripening grain, Here tobacco plants are growing, In the fields not sown with corn, Tobacco plants—big as cactus—Just as sure as you are born.

Yes, they're large as good-sized cactus, Larger in our home-like view, But it's as fine a grade as Is that old "Kentucky Dew."

Here all people reap a harvest, Money in bank from year to year. All the green calamity howlers, Lose their jobs when they land here

Here the "dry" ways are the highways, Built high and dry from rains & flood, Here the "good roads delegation," Swear the roads are suit'nly good.

But of pikes and highways finest, There's a "road" that suits my taste; 'Tis the line of Solid Comfort, And the trains let no time waste.

From St. Louis thro' Kentucky, Operates this road of class, Across the famous old "Green River" On its roadbed smooth as glass.

You'll know what road I speak of, If you listen to my advice, For you'll need it in your business, On your trip to Paradise.

In your travels thro' Kentucky—Hustler beat them under the wire. "Get the 'Henderson Route' habit!" 'Tis a good one to acquire.

—JACK "HENDERSON" GALLAGHER.

Dragging Patris

2835 Keeley St., Chicago, Ill., Oct. 2, 1902.

I suffered with falling and congestion of the womb, with severe pains through the groins. I suffered terribly at the time of menstruation, had blinding headaches and rushing of blood to the brain. What to try I knew not, for it seemed that I had tried all and failed, but I had never tried Wine of Cardui, that blessed remedy for sick women. I found it pleasant to take and soon knew that I had the right medicine. New blood seemed to course through my veins and after using eleven bottles I was a well woman.

Maudie Bush

Mrs. Bush is now in perfect health because she took Wine of Cardui for menstrual disorders, bearing down pains and blinding headaches when all other remedies failed to bring her relief. Any sufferer may secure health by taking Wine of Cardui in her home. The first bottle convinces the patient she is on the road to health.

For advice in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, "The Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.
